

13 Playa Blanca - Las Breñas - Yaiza

A big walk in Lanzarote's context, which follows the new GR131 across vast plains, allows us to enjoy expansive views of the south. Once we get out of the not-too-inspiring streets of Playa Blanca, we are about to experience a wild vastness and solitude of sheer plains and malpais on our way to Las Breñas, where we have a choice of great refreshments, before setting off for the second leg of the route to Yaiza, a section quite rich with splendid panoramic vistas. Check the weather forecast before planning this trip - in case of strong northern wind it is better to postpone this one - you don't want to end up battling against the wind as the route in its entirety follows a north-easterly course.

Access by car: Park in Yaiza at a car park 100 metres SW of Wp.24 next to the plaza and bus to the start in Playa Blanca; the bus stop in Yaiza is 200 metres E along Calle Vista de Yaiza. Or park in Playa Blanca behind the bus station, and return by bus from Yaiza.

Access by bus: The 60 runs between Arrecife, Yaiza and Playa Blanca, and the 161 between Puerto del Carmen, Yaiza and Playa Blanca.

Starting from Playa Blanca bus station (Wp.1 0M), we follow the pavement Wp.3 start of trail (NE) to the large roundabout, which we cross via a zebra crossing to join Avenida a Femés. We follow the pavement (NE) along the road past another roundabout then Cay Beach Sun Hotel (Wp.2 13M), before coming out of town. 30 metres after the 'Playa Blanca' sign, we find a GR signpost and a trail (Wp.3 22M) heading north.

Taking the boulder lined trail (N) we swing left before springing over rubble onto a dirt track (Wp.4 27M). We follow the track (N), skirting an abandoned compound and piles of rubble. Our surroundings improve as our track swings left to round the corner of the compound before turning right (N) 100 metres later, leaving the ghost town behind.

A track joins us from our left before we cross an eroded dirt road, 30 metres after which we bear right at a Y-junction (Wp.5 42M) onto a trail, passing under an electricity line. We are on a broad trail, which heads to a farmstead. Joining a stone wall of the farm and the dirt track that lines it, we bear left at a Y-junction at the corner of the wall. Small cairns guide us to cross the farm's access track (Wp.6 55M) to leave the very last homestead until Las Breñas behind, our track soon dwindling to a trail. Ignoring a broad stone-lined track to our right, we cross two ruined stone walls, after which our trail swings left. We round a large cairn on a rise before descending briefly, having views of Las Breñas far ahead of us.

Crossing a faint dirt track (Wp.7 67M), our trail levels off before we find ourselves climbing again. We circle a hillock before crossing two watercourses (Wp.8 77M). Hints of old terraces line our trail as the houses of Las Breñas get closer with each step. Passing a notice board on ancient settlements in the area, we join a stone wall (Wp.9 87M) on our right side. Traces of bygone farming are becoming more obvious as we have walls on both sides, before climbing to join a rough dirt track (Wp.10 94M). Bearing left, careful footwork is needed as our track is heavily eroded and rough, taking us up to join a dirt track at a signpost just before stepping onto the tarmac and the first house, 'Casa del Roble'. Past the house we come to a road junction (Wp.11 103M) in Las Breñas.

Bearing right, we take Calle los Roques to walk through the quiet village, passing a Manrique style cactus garden. 40 metres after a transformer tower we bear left at a Y-junction (Wp.12 108M) into Calle Victor Fernandez Gopar. Twelve minutes later, we turn left at a T-junction (Wp.13 120M) with Calle El Arado, to walk past Plaza San Luis with the school and playgrounds before coming to a junction at a bus stop (Wp.14 124M), where we have a choice of refreshments. Beyond the bus stop on our left is Bar Tres, while up on our right we find Casa Marcos.

After a break (0M), we continue from the bus stop junction up Calle La Cancela to a sharp dogleg bend where a dirt track goes off to our left (Wp.15 4M) by a GR signpost. Here we are joined by Walk 14. Taking to the track, we pass the village's last white house, before passing the wall of a farm. We are out on our own again, following the rough stone littered track as we pass an electricity pylon (Wp.16 12M), our track dwindling to a width of a walking trail. We cross several watercourses, our trail broadening again, before crossing a water-eroded gully with fine sand (Wp.17 20M) amongst neglected terraces. The track becomes smooth and well walkable for us to enjoy the splendid panorama ahead as we walk through another eroded sandy section.

A short gentle climb is followed by a descent from where we have views of the La Finca white farm, our next objective, now still far in the distance. A track from the right joins us before we cross a rough gully with cracked slabs of old concrete (Wp.18 29M), the remains of a paved trail. Our gritty track is now more comfortable until we pass a 20-metre long sandy section and get onto more stone-littered stretch with sections of bare rock, having ruined stone walls on our left.

Crossing a watercourse, then another one (Wp.19 38M) twenty metres left of a lava wall - quite a feature in the otherwise barren land - we walk down the fine gritty track, crossing a series of gullies. We come down into a depression where we join a dirt track (Wp.20 44M) to bear right; its surface is so smooth that we can stride out as we parallel an embankment of the LZ-701 road.

old main road. From here we have a choice of following our 'Yaiza's Volcanic Gardens' route (in reverse) to Wp.24 or sticking to the GR131, our choice, by descending the steps to the road (refreshments in Bar/Rest El Campo opposite) before walking up the road, Calle Vista de Yaiza. Passing a bus stop, GR mapboard and art gallery we finish our route symbolically at Bar Stop by the church on Plaza de los Remedios (Wp.24 99M). A bus stop (along with a supermarket) is 200 metres ahead along the main street.

Climbing gently, we cross the access track for the La Finca houses (Wp.21 57M) before coming to overlook Yaiza's western roundabout; a true road design art when viewed from above. Continuing on the dirt track as it curves around below Montaña Cinta, we come to the end of our Walk 12 route (Wp.22 77M), which we follow along to the wide stepped descent between two pillars (Wp.23 85M) leading down to the
